Plans Made And Policies Formed Before Opening

Harry B. Cunningham Originated K Mart Idea

The success of K Mart discount department stores, actually is the result of merchandising and service policies developed before the first K Mart became a reality in March, 1962.

During his two years as general vice-president (1957) and 1958, Harry B. Cunningham traveled across the United States investigating the operations of all types of retailing.

The main purpose of his research was to determine what future course of action should be taken by the Kresge Co. to increase its profitability.

Decision Made

Shortly after Cunningham was elected to the chief executive post in 1959, a decision was made that the company would move into discount retailing.

C. Lloyd Yoho, vice-president discount operator, was charged with the task of studying all major discounters in the United States, analyzing their strengths and weaknesses in order to develop standards upon which a Kresge-operated discount chain could live and grow on a sound basis.

When the first K Mart opened in 1962, the K Mart blueprint was firmly established.

Indication of Soundness. Although experience and research continually result in improvement, there have been no important deviations from the original specifications.

An indication of their soundness is the existence, at the end of November, 1967, of 210 K Marts in the United States; Canada and Puerto Rico contributing a major share of the company's sales and profits.

It is impossible to identify the most important K Mart policy since all contribute to the success of the operation.

Truly Competitive

However, the policy most rigidly enforced by top management requires K Mart selling prices to be truly competitive.

They must be as low, or lower than, the selling prices available to K Mart customers within the trading area.

Although price tags on K Mart merchandise are determined by the main office, each K Mart manager is responsible personally for keeping his store competitive.

The manager may lower recommended prices, but he does not have the right to raise them.

No Imperfects

All K Mart merchandise must meet rigid quality standards. There are no imperfections, irregulars, or substandards on K Mart counters.

K Mart stores are publicized as true discount department stores.

To gain complete customer acceptance, K Marts must be just that.

Only when unusual demand requires imports to carry certain "fair trade" lines, do customers find a few items that are not discounted.

Equal Superiority

But policy requires the replacement of such merchandise as quickly as other items of equal or superior value and selling merit can be developed.

In the early days of discount retailing, many leading advertised brands carried by discount stores had to be obtained from jobbers or wholesalers which made it difficult to reduce selling prices dramatically.

The Kresge Co. was determined to break down this barrier, realizing that repeat traffic depended on satisfied shoppers who could be assured of buying quality and leading-brand merchandise at promised discount prices.

Concentrated Effort

A concentrated effort was company, in 1958. He was 49 years old and had been with the company 28 years.

He was named president and chief executive officer in 1959.

TWO years later, he was responsible for launching a new retail division—small discount stores called Jupiters.

The next year, Cunningham opened the first K Mart and followed it with an expansion campaign that produced 215 additional K Marts by January, 1968.

At least 50 more are planned each year for the next four years.

During Cunningham's service in Kresge's top councils, sales have tripled to $1,000,000,000, and stores have increased to more than 916 of the three separate types.

Cunningham, a native of Home Camp, Penn., left college after completing his sophomore year at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, to accept a job in a daily newspaper in Harrisburg, Penn.

A YEAR later, he entered Kresge's management-training program, serving as a stockboy in Lynchburg, Virginia.

Cunningham became a store manager in 1940, a district manager in 1947, assistant sales director in 1951, sales director in 1956, general vice-president in 1957 and was elected to the top post in 1959.

In May of 1967, Cunningham was elected chairman of the board.

Every K Mart newspaper advertisement repeats this guarantee:

"The K Mart division is gradually creating its own brands of exceptionally valuable staple lines."

Every K Mart newspaper advertisement repeats this guarantee:

"The K Mart service desk is conveniently located at the front of the store, where attendants are always available to refund a customer's money, exchange merchandise, or credit charge accounts. The only requirement is the purchase receipt."

As with an eye to improving merchandise quality while maintaining discount prices, the company has an active import program.

Buying representatives in European and Asian markets work closely with the home-office import department.

Company buyers frequently travel abroad in search of quality merchandise and K Mart executives.

Imports Tested

All imported merchandise is required to equal or surpass the quality specifications of its domestic counterpart and be available at lower cost.

K Mart merchandise assortments are limited to best sellers.

The profitability of every K Mart is judged by the volume it produces, the cost to sell, and the number of times it turns annually.

The only really important measure of K Mart success is the rate of return on total investment.

The customer who goes to a K Mart in response to an newspaper advertisement will find advertised prices prominently displayed.

Complete Confidence

The company's advertising policy, perhaps more than any other standard, was designed to gain customers' complete confidence in the integrity and credibility of K Mart.

Long before K Mart came into existence, the Kresge Co. followed a policy providing for satisfaction guaranteed or your stores.

A Jewelry department without superior goods make Beaumont's new K Mart truly a one-stop shopping center. Engagement and wedding rings of superior quality, fashion earrings, all the fine makes of watches—everything in the jewelry line, with, of course, K Mart's dependable money-back guarantee.

Gerald Issler, right, presents the keys to K Mart of Beaumont to the manager, Thomas Davies, as K Mart is pronounced ready for the formal opening.

Clyde K. Bowles Is Chief S.S. Kresge Man in South

TOP man for the S.S. Kresge Co. in the southern region is Clyde K. Bowles, Inc. is responsible for more than 170 stores in 16 states. The stores are of three types: K Mart department stores, Kresge variety stores, and Jupiter discount stores.

Bowles' responsibility is supervision of store operation in this region and working closely with its district managers to see that each store manager tailors his merchandise assortment to meet the shopping needs of its particular community.

Among other duties, Bowles sees that the quality of goods remains high, that prices remain low, that the "money-back guarantee" policy is maintained, and that outstanding leadership ability is recognized within all personnel ranks.

The retail business offers golden opportunities for young people trying to decide on a career.

Service Desk

The K Mart service desk is conveniently located at the front of the store, where attendants are always available to refund a customer's money, exchange merchandise, or credit charge accounts.

"Of course," Bowles said, "the work can be hard, but rewards for those who put in their best effort come much faster than in any other field."

Bowles' own career is a testimonial to his beliefs. He started in the retail business in 1931 as a stockboy in a Kresge store shortly after graduation from the University of Illinois. He has served as a store manager, district manager, assistant to a top executive and buyer before becoming a top executive himself in 1960, as regional manager.

Bowles also served as mid-western regional manager for four years before his present assignment at the beginning of 1967.

All Beaumonters

"A staff made up entirely of Beaumont people will assure our being alert to all of the needs of our new customers," Davies said.

"The first K Mart opened in 1962 in a suburb of Detroit and was based on Mr. Cunningham's concept of 'top quality merchandise sold at a small profit to induce a high volume of sales,'" Davies said.

"This policy," he continued, "brought immediate and overwhelming public acceptance which was the basis for expansion to 237 K Marts in the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico by June of 1968."

"At least 50 K Marts are scheduled to open in 1968 and 50 or more a year are scheduled to open in each of the following four years," Davies concluded.
